The National Trust's Night among the Stars

Join National Trust Treasures and well known personalities at the National Trust Gala dinner in Sydney on June 3rd.

High profile Australians including Phillip Adams, Ray Martin, Ian Kiernan and David Williamson will dine with guests and share the stories of their illustrious careers.

The glamorous black tie evening at the Star Room, Darling Harbour, will feature entertainment by internationally renowned classical pianist Amber Hammond and young Opera singer Angela Edwards.

Tim Goodman, Chairman of Bonhams and Goodman will preside over a fund-raising auction including an array of rare and highly sought after items including a holiday to New Zealand's Kauri Cliffs valued at $15,000, an original floral painting by Ken Done, a night in the ABC Radio National Studios sitting in on the production of Philip Adams' 'Late Night Live' program, and an original Norman Lindsay pencil drawing.

National Trust Executive Director, John Neish, says the Gala Dinner is the highlight of the Trust's social calendar and an important fundraising event.

"As an independent charity we are greatly dependent upon the generosity of the community to be able to continue our valuable work in heritage Advocacy, Conservation and Education.

"We encourage supporters of the National Trust to join us on Wednesday June 3rd, for the unique opportunity to dine with our National Treasures and support the Trust's fundraising appeal," Mr Neish said.
